

"An interesting event at my School!"

Last year our art teacher organized a photography contest. All students could participate taking their own pictures.

This contest lasted ^(for) two weeks and it was a very interesting activity, because the teacher ^{taught} ~~learned~~ us to develop the photos. The students had to take five photos of our town and then a group of teachers chose the best picture. The winner of this contest won a digital camera, so he could take more wonderful photos.

In conclusion, it was a very funny event because I also participated in it and my classmate won it.

AN EVENT

It was a general strike's day, in the Mercadona, the workers wanted ^{to} work but some people weren't ^{letting them} leaving and they couldn't enter.

The people were in the door, they had banners, ^{they} were shouting and later more people came. Some were ^{from} another village. It was a serious problem because the workers wanted to work and opened the supermarket. My street was with a lot of cars.

Then, the police came, one or two cars but they couldn't take them out.

One hour later, five or six four-wheel-drive vehicles came and in the cars there were many special corps of police. It was very exciting because they were tall, very strong and had big weapons. When the people saw them, some of them went and the others were ~~more~~ calmer.

Finally, the police got / the workers could enter but they didn't open the supermarket for safety.

Last year, in Sierra Sur School, the students did a very original theater. They were a long time preparing it and there ~~were~~ students of all ages. For them it was a new experience with their classmates.

The theater was ^{about/get in} on the Middle Age and the room was decorated ^{at} with medieval objects. There wasn't a any theater because students didn't have scripts but they recited poems in different languages. In addition there were two presenters who opened the theater and gave way to the other classmates. Everything was very nice and worked. The theater was directed to parents and teachers but could go all ^{S+V} they wanted. There were students who played instruments and others sang.

In the end, everything went as planned and parents and people who saw it liked it very much, came out very happy.
